PREFACE.

THE lineage of all the Tuck families, whose statistics are more or less fully given in this book, may be traced back to ROBERT TUCK, who settled at Winnacunnet, now Hampton, N. H., in the Autumn of 1638. Of his two sons, Edward only, who appears to have been the younger, emigrated with his parents, and lived in Hampton; and it is the genealogy of his descendants, only, that is here given. Edward Tuck married and had two sons, the first dying in childhood. John, born about the time of his father's death, lived to mature age, married, and reared a family. Hence, Robert,[1] Edward[2] and John,[3] each in his own generation, was the sole male representative of the family, and a progenitor of all the families of generations succeeding his own.

In consideration of the last named fact, it was thought proper, in forming a plan of this work, that more space and more minuteness of detail should be allowed in relation to these three representative men and their affairs, than would be judicious in regard to any in private life, from whom only a part of later generations had sprung.

The bulk of the facts connected with those early generations has been, by careful and patient examination, culled from ancient records, wills, deeds and other old writings, to which I have had access. Some of the incidents relating to them may be regarded as trivial in themselves, but where they would serve to exhibit the character, or make known the habits, of the person or persons of whom they were related, they have not been rejected.

Much of the knowledge relating to the families in the nineteenth century has been gained by personal interviews, or by correspondence by mail with well-informed gentlemen and ladies of the Tuck families. To all who have in any way afforded aid or encouragement, I tender my thanks.

I do not wish to conceal the fact, that the preparation of this work has been so much in accordance with my taste and fondness for genealogical and antiquarian research, that the labor has been, in a large degree, an actual pleasure. Still, the work might not have been engaged in, had I not been persuaded that the material previously collected, and other material still attainable, would, if I should neglect to use it, be to a great extent beyond the reach of any person who should hereafter attempt such a work ; and I will add, that I should not have undertaken it, had not my friend and relative, Amos Tuck, of Exeter, and his son Edward Tuck, of New York, generously assumed the payment of all expenses that will not be covered by the sale, at a price much below the actual cost, of a portion of the three hundred copies printed.

EXPLANATIONS.

THE numbers at the left of the page form a consecutive series, beginning with Robert Tuck and including his children, the children of his sons, and so on through the successive generations, each person having but one number, and if occasion is found to mention a son as the head of a family, a +, prefixed to this number in the consecutive series, indicates the fact, and shows that it may be found under the same number, in larger type in the middle of a page and occupying a whole line. Any number so printed in large type indicates that the same may be found in its appropriate place in the consecutive series.

The small figure at the end of a name denotes the generation of the person, reckoning from Robert[1] as the first in the order of generations; as John,[3] Edward.[4] Numbers thus placed also indicate the relationship of the persons so marked when they are in the line of direct descent. Thus, Robert,[1] Edward,[2] John[3] denote the relationship of father, son and grandson; and John,[3] Jonathan[4] and Samuel,[5] if in direct descent, denote the same relationship.

Some explanation of the methods of reckoning time in the 17th century and about half of the 18th may be necessary, in order to prevent mistakes.

The civil and ecclesiastical year, in England, began on the 25th of March, which was called the first month, often written "1 mo.," and when the name of any month was denoted by its number, the reckoning began with March. Thus, 7 mo. was used for September; 12 mo. for February. But the historical year, often used in narration, began January 1. Hence, dates between January 1 and March 25 were ambiguous, and to avoid any mistakes, the plan of double dating was adopted, as January, 1728-9—that is, 1728 by the civil year, and 1729 by the historical.

By an act of Parliament, passed in 1751, the day next following December 31—that is, January 1, was thereafter to be the first day of the year.

Another change was also made by the same act. In order to rectify an error (which need not here be explained), and to bring the reckoning of time into conformity with the Gregorian Calendar, so called, it was ordered that the day next following the second day of September, 1752, should be reckoned the fourteenth day of September, thus dropping eleven days.

This was called a change of style. Earlier dates were said to be in Old Style ; later dates, in New Style.

All the dates in this work before September 2, 1752, are in Old Style. To change them to New Style, ten days must be added to those prior to 1700, and eleven days to those later than that time.

The word Goodman occurs several times in this book, where it is used in accordance with an early custom in New England, as a term of civility, where we should use Mr.—a term formerly allowed to only a few men.

TUCK GENEALOGY.

Robert Tuck,

The paternal ancestor of all the Tuck (or Tucke) families that have lived in Hampton, Rockingham County, New Hampshire, and of all those that went out to other places, with their numerous descendants, came from Gorlston, a seaboard town in the northeasterly part of the County of Suffolk, England, bordering upon the County of Norfolk, from which latter county came many of the early settlers of Hampton—the Dows, Moultons, Pages and others.

Gorlston lies about 125 miles from London, in a northeasterly direction. Although not a large town, it is a place of some note. To the descendants of Robert Tuck, it has a peculiar interest as the birthplace of their first American ancestor, and the home of himself and his family to the time of their emigration. They naturally wish to know something more of the town and its surroundings than merely its name and point of location on the map of England. Some of them have, indeed, enjoyed the privilege of a personal visit to Gorlston. They have seen the town and its surroundings, and have learned something of its past history, by inquiries made upon the spot. Of this number is my friend Amos Tuck, of Exeter, N. H., from whom, in the summer of 1872, I received an interesting letter, giving an account of his visit and some of the impressions he received.

Presuming that the letter will be of interest to others as well as myself, I shall introduce it, nearly entire, as follows:

EXETER, N. H., JULY 25, 1872.

DEAR SIR:

As I know you to be deeply interested in the antiquities of Hampton, I will give you a brief account of a recent experience of my own, which, I trust, will be of some interest to you.

As you know, I trace my ancestry back to Robert Tuck, one of the original settlers of Hampton, in which town were born all my paternal ancestors since; and where all of them, except my father, died. Mr. Samuel G. Drake, the antiquary, who also traces his ancestry, on the mother's side, to the same Robert Tuck, ascertained, some years since, that he emigrated from Gorlston, in England, and Mr. Drake visited that town some ten years ago. Being recently in England, with a few days at my disposal free from business, I concluded to gratify my own wish of looking upon the place, which our ancestor called home, and looked back to with interest from his long years of residence in Hampton.

Gorlston is on the easterly coast of England, the northernmost town in the County of Suffolk, and is a continuous village with Yarmouth, the southernmost town on the coast in the County of Norfolk. The Yare River runs southerly, parallel to the coast from Yarmouth, emptying into the sea at Gorlston, having Great Yarmouth between the River and the Sea; and Little Yarmouth and Gorlston on the west, the River constituting the harbor for 600 or 700 vessels owned there, with a fine bridge above the principal shipping, though the draw allows vessels to follow the navigable stream far up into the country. Yarmouth has about 30,000 inhabitants, and Gorlston about 4,000. The principal business is the mackerel and herring fisheries, carried on here more extensively than from any other place in England. It is 124 miles from London, northeasterly, and 19 miles easterly of Norwich.

In going to Yarmouth, I went from London northerly through Cambridge to Ely, where I took a Railroad easterly to Norwich, and thence to Yarmouth. In returning, I took a Railroad nearer the coast, going through Ipswich, Chelmsford, and sundry other towns reminding me of America by their names.

Arriving at Gorlston, I had only the coachman who drove me from the station at Yarmouth to help me find the most intelligent man of the place. He mentioned several, as likely to give me information, among them the clerk of the Parish. To him I went, finding him a humble tailor, son of a tailor still living, but superannuated, and wearing a coat of ancient style, suggestive of rigorous economy and narrow means. He was an estimable man of 45 years, but of limited knowledge and narrow views. The "wicker," as he called the vicar, was absent, and he bewailed my loss in not being able to see him. I was more glad to see the clerk, because he was a native of the town, while the vicar was from some other place. He took me to the church, which was one of the oldest any where known, its origin being lost in antiquity. As I entered under its arched roof, and on paved floor, worn by the feet of many generations, I felt sure I trod upon stones which my ancestors, for generations prior to 1636, had trod upon before me. The House was of stone, of Gothic architecture, and the floor and pews had not apparently ever been changed. In the vestry room over the wide hall-entrance, I examined the Records of the Church—deaths, births, marriages and baptisms—but found nothing earlier than 1683. The clerk told me, with suppressed breath and almost a shudder at the sacrilege, that Cromwell quartered his soldiers in this, and other churches, and that they destroyed the older records. So we have at Hampton older records* than at Gorlston.

I found in several places on the records, persons of the name of Tuck, and was agreeably surprised to see that the oldest spelling, in fact the only spelling of our name was without the final e.† No person of my name now resides in the place, though I heard of several in other localities not far off, and one, a minister, of the Independent, or Congregational order. The counties of Norfolk and Suffolk are spoken of now, as the hot-bed of Puritanism years ago, and subsequently; and are now largely Independent. The people have limited intercourse with foreigners, and the parish clerk, in answer to my inquiry whether many people emigrated to America, replied that some went, and one man went about three years ago whom he knew. He was primitive in all his ideas, and if one of our ancestors should rise from the dead, and appear as he was when alive, I believe he would scarcely better represent his period, than did this clerk, pious and good, so many generations later.

* Records of Hampton begin in 1638.

† Robert Tuck's name, wherever I have found it written by himself or by his contemporaries, is generally without a final e. His grandson, John, sometimes wrote his own name with, and sometimes without, an e. More recently, the name is written with only four letters. A few families add an e.

I was struck with the resemblance of Gorlston and Yarmouth, in situation, to Hampton. One looks out easterly on the sea, and westerly on marshes, as at Hampton; and you hear the beach spoken of as at Hampton, with its public houses, in which summer boarders are accommodated. The people live partly by fishing and partly by farming, and I cannot doubt that Hampton attracted some of the original settlers, partly at least, on account of its resemblance to their old home. I did not see any Old Hampton names, except Palmer, on the signs of shops at Gorlston, but I think Robert Tuck was not the only one of the first settlers of Hampton who came from that town.

The fishermen ply their business in larger vessels than at Hampton, and go largely to the "Dutch Coast," as they call it, 90 miles distant. May it not be that familiarity with that coast acquired by fishermen, led Robinson with his flock first to Holland? I suggested this to Dr. Palfrey, the historian of New England, who regarded it as highly probable.

I observed, on my return from Yarmouth to London, that for generations the people have been damming back the tide-water from the marshy land, with very great advantage and success. Many thousand acres, once salt marshes, have been converted into fertile arable land, and the finest south-down cattle were pasturing in large herds upon the richest grass on these meadows. I believe it practicable to create immense agricultural wealth in New England by similar defences against the sea, and that at some time in the future the work will be done. Still, it should not be undertaken without ascertaining carefully, at first, what can, and what cannot be done, in resisting the highest tides and the most violent action of the ocean waves.

Yours truly,

Amos Tuck.

The year of Robert Tuck's birth is not known. He came to New England in 1636, or a little earlier, and lived awhile in Watertown, near Boston, and in Salem. In 1638, he was a petitioner (with others) to the General Court at Boston, for leave to settle at Winnacunnet (Hampton). The petition was granted early in September, and a settlement was begun by some of the grantees the same autumn. Others appear to have waited till the spring following. Robert Tuck, according to tradition, was of the former number. On the 7th of September, 1639, he was made freeman. About one year later, the town granted him a quantity of land to be located afterward. A house-lot had undoubtedly been assigned to him at the beginning of the settlement, by the committee* appointed by the General Court to lay out and dispose of lands. His house-lot, and other lands granted to him afterward and located as early as 1644, were during that year entered upon the Town Records, as follows:

Robert Tuck of Hampton:

1. Imp^{r} Ten acres of upland granted unto him for a house lott: layeing between the upland of frances Swayne sometimes Robert Sandersons toword the North: & a common waye toword the South: abutting upon the meeting house green toword the east: & upland of John Crosses toword the west: more or lesse as it is layd out—

* This committee consisted of Simon Bradstreet, afterward Governor of Massachusetts; Edward Rawson, many years Secretary of Massachusetts; and John Winthrop, Jr., afterward Governor of Connecticut.

2. Item thirtye acres of upland granted unto him: layeing between the upland of Richard Swaynes toword the west: & upland of frances Swayne toword the east: abutting upon a comon waye toword the north in p^{r}t & the north-east in p^{r}t: & a certain medow or marsh toword the south: more or lesse as it is layd out—

3. Item twenty acres of upland granted him: laying between the upland of frances Swayne toword the South: & upland of William fullers toword the north: abutting upon a common waye toword the east: & a common grownd toword the west: more or lesse as it is layd out—

4. Item five acres of medow granted unto him: laying between a certayne brooke called mill-brooke toword the east: & a certaine creek by James Davis medow in p^{r}t & frances Swaynes medow in p^{r}t toword the west: abutting upon the aforesayd brooke toword the north: & the medow of Phylemon dalton in p^{r}t & the medow of william fuller in p^{r}t toword the south & south-west: more or lesse as it is layd out—

The several tracts here described do not include the whole of Robert Tuck's interest in the lands of the township. When this record was made, only a small part of the territory had been disposed of by grant or by sale. Several thousand acres were still held in common, to be granted, sold or divided, as the freeholders and commoners might consider for their interest. As, however, the just claims of some of the commoners were greater than those of others, it was necessary to consider and determine their respective rights. This matter was settled in 1646, by regarding the whole value of the common lands as being divided into 147 equal parts, which were called shares, and determining to how many shares each of the commoners should be entitled. Robert Tuck was to have three shares.

The house-lot assigned to Robert Tuck, as above described, was very near the spot selected by the settlers as the site for their meeting-house, which was evidently intended to be the business or social centre of the settlement, as for many years it was in fact.

The location of the house-lot may be understood by people resident in the town, from the following statement:—The southeast corner of the lot was a few rods westerly from Rand's Hill, so-called, and was nearly identical with the southeast corner of the present triangular tract formerly known as "Squire Leavitt's Garden," now owned by heirs of Jabez Towle, deceased. The southerly side of the lot extended from this corner along the road leading from "The Green" near the Academy towards Hampton Falls, about as the fence now stands, to "Ward's lane" near the Railroad crossing. The lot was probably bounded on the west by this lane; and on the east, as appears from the record, by the road from Rand's Hill towards North Hampton.

The dwelling house located near the southeasterly corner of the lot between the roads already mentioned as leading, one to the Hampton Falls, and the other to North Hampton, was conveniently situated for a public house, and was for many years kept as such, it being the earliest public house in the town. Such an establishment was then known as an ordinary, and no person was allowed to keep an ordinary without a license from the county court. The form of the license was not always the same, nor were the privileges granted. Usually, the holder was allowed to sell, by retail, to travellers and strangers—not always to townsmen—beer, wine and "strong waters"; but he was strictly prohibited from selling to servants and minors.

He was required to furnish food and lodging for travellers, and stabling for horses at reasonable prices; and in Hampton (then a half-shire town) entertainment for the court and juries, and clients attending the court.

After residing in Hampton fifteen years, or more, Goodman Tuck had occasion to visit England on business, to be gone a year and perhaps longer. Such was the state of his family, that the keeping of the ordinary was necessarily given up during his absence, and another person licensed to carry on the business. After his return from England, he appears to have been desirous of re-opening his ordinary, and being encouraged by representations made by some of the inhabitants of the town, he concluded to do so; and immediately resumed his former business without waiting for the sitting of the court and the renewal of his license.

This course brought him into trouble. Complaint having been made to the court, he was fined £5 for keeping an ordinary without license, though a full year was allowed in which to pay the fine. At the same court he was licensed to go on with his business. But he wanted to be released from the fine imposed by the court, and to this end petitioned the General Court to remit it, on the ground, that though he had broken the law, he had done it through ignorance, supposing his former license to be still in force. The court remitted £3 of the fine, but required the balance to be paid. Ever afterward till the close of life the ordinary was kept by him.

From his occupation as a seller of wine, Goodman Tuck was appropriately styled vintner, and we find this title in some instances appended to his name in deeds of conveyance, writs, and some other papers. By trade he was a tailor, though I have no evidence that he worked at his trade after coming to New England. He was also styled chirurgeon, a term formerly used to denote a person whose profession was "to heal diseases by manual operations, instruments, or external applications."* That he sometimes acted in this capacity, may be inferred from an entry found in the Town Records, under date of May 15, 1658, in reference to a stranger mentioned as a "seaman lying in Town under Gōd[m]† Tucks hands at surgerie." Another item of record furnishes evidence not only that he professed to cure diseases, but also that he could by legal process recover pay for professional services rendered. This case was tried at the term of the court held in Hampton, Oct. 5, 1652. The record is :

Rob: Tuck plaintiff ag[t] Tho: Davis & Steven Kent defend[ts] in an accōn of y[e] case for refuseing to pay him for the cure of an Indian to y[e] vallue of twelve pounds, the court find for y[e] plaintiff tenn pound damage and costs of court. Execucōn respited three months—allowed for costs 2[lb] 4[s] 7[d].

On the 14th of June following, the court ordered the clerk to pay Robert Tuck 30 shillings of the cost taxed, which with the ten pounds damage, he accepted in full settlement of the suit.

Robert Tuck sometimes held town offices. He was a Selectman in 1648, 1649, 1652 and 1657. On the 16: 1 mo. [March]: 1647, the seven men [Selectmen] agreed that Wm. Eastow [a member of the board] "should keep the Town book"; and the same day they appointed Robert Tuck, Town Clerk, who held the office till May 15, 1650 (three years and two months). At the county court held 2: 8 mo. [October]: 1649, he was appointed "y^e^ clarke of y^e^ writts for the Town of Hampton;" that is, Clerk of the Commissioners for Small Causes [that board being a Court of Record].

In 1653, a tax of £55 5s. 10d. was levied by the town. The whole number of tax-payers was seventy-three, being an average of 14s. 1 3-4d. nearly, for each of them. The largest tax was £2 10s. 10d.; the smallest, 3s 6d. Robert Tuck's tax was 14s. 6d. One other person was taxed to the same amount; twenty-six persons paid, each, a larger sum, and forty-five a smaller sum.

No. 1.

ROBERT[1] TUCK was married and had children before his emigration. The time of his marriage and the maiden name of his wife are both unknown to the writer. Her baptismal name was Joanna (also variously written Joanah, Johana, Johannah). They had four children that lived to mature age, all born in England; but as nothing has been learned of the time of birth of either parent or any of the children, the order in which the children are here arranged may not be the order of their births.

Children:

2. i. ROBERT,[2] was left in England when his parents came to America with the rest of their family. He married, but I know nothing of his family, save that he had a son William,[3] to whom, in 1670, he gave power of attorney to transact business for him in Hampton, as will hereafter appear. He was then of Gorlston. Of his son William,[3] Mr. Samuel G. Drake says, that he "settled in the county of Essex (Mass.), and is the ancestor of the Tucks of that county, and their descendants."

3. ii. ELIZABETH,[2] m. John Sherburne, of Portsmouth, and had four children: Henry, John, Mary and Elizabeth.

4. iii. MARY,[2] m. Lieut. John Samborne, of Hampton, a man of considerable influence, and often elected to office. He was a Selectman 8 years, and a Commissioner for Small Causes 4 years. He died Oct. 20, 1692, æ. 71. His wife died Dec. 30, 1668. They had: 1. John, b. about 1649; m. Judith Coffin. 2. Mary, b. April 12, 1651; d. young. 3. Abial, b. Feb. 23, 1653; m. +5. iv. EDWARD,[2] m. Mary Philbrick; d. April 6, 1652.

Goodman Tuck died intestate, Oct. 4, 1664; and at the county court, held in Hampton in the same month, administration was granted to Joanna Tuck, his widow, and John Samborne, his son-in-law. The inventory of his estate, as appraised on the 17th of November following, amounted to £385 17s. 2d.

At the court holden in Salisbury, April 11, 1665, it was ordered, "that Robert Tuck's estate remain in the hands of the adm^{r} (John Samborne), for the use of the widow during her natural life; and what then remains, to be divided unto y^{e} three children of Robert Tuck; i.e. Robert Tuck, Elizabeth Sherburne & Mary Samborne, & y^{e} grandchild, Jn^{o} Tuck, y^{e} son of Edward Tuck" (deceased).

About four years after the death of Robert Tuck, the following document was presented for the consideration and approval of the court.

Articles of agreem^{t} made & concluded upon by & between M^{r} John Samborn on y^{e} one p^{rte} & Johannah Tuck on y^{e} other p^{rt} both residing at Hampton in y^{e} county of Norfolk & Administrato^{r} & Administratrix to y^{e} estate of Robert Tuck deceased: Imp^{r} It is agreed vpon y^{t} s^{d} widdow Johannah Tuck shall deliver vp her power of Administrat^{r} in this p^{r}sent Court vnto y^{e} afores^{d} M^{r} John Samborn concerning y^{e} afores^{d} Estate of Robert Tuck deceased; In consideration whereof y^{e} afores^{d} John Samborn doe engage to pay vnto y^{e} afores^{d} widdow Johannah Tuck the full sum of fiueteen pounds p^{r} yeare during y^{e} terme of her natturell life & y^{t} she shall enjoy out of y^{e} afores^{d} Estate the vse of two cowes & three acres of meadow duering her life afores^{d} w^{ch} meadow is intended to bee y^{e} same w^{ch} is now in her possession bee it more or lesse & other necessary things for her housekeeping as shall be vpon y^{e} mature consideration of Jonathan King & Thomas Mastin [Marston] thought convenient, they both being made choyse of by her for that purpose w^{ch} parties are to receiue y^{e} aforementioned fiueteen pounds annually for her vse. This was ownd by both parties aboue named (i. e.) John Samborn & Joanna Tuck to bee their act & deed: And wth y^{e} consent of both parties y^{e} Court orders it to bee Recorded: as attests

THO: BRADBURY. rec^{r}

Ent & Recorded y^{e} 29 of y^{e} 8th mo: 1668.

Whether all the stipulations in these articles were at first faithfully observed, does not appear; but about five years from the time of their being laid before the court, and, with the consent of both the contracting parties, the court having ordered them to be recorded, one of the parties had become dissatisfied with the other's course, and applied to the court for relief. The nature of the complaint, and the order of the court, will appear from the record:

At the Hampton Court, 14th 8 mo (October) : 1673.

The aged widow Joanna Tuck complained that she wanted necessary comforts which John Samborn admr to her late husband's estate did not take due care to furnish, though there was sufficient estate in his hands to do it. The court ordered the selectmen, or three of them,* selected by the board, to see that she was properly furnished with things useful [needful?]. And the admr was required to pay the bills out of the estate of the decd and was authorized to sell land of said estate, if needful & was to keep a faithful account of his disbursements, which should be allowed on settlement of his account of administration.

It is not probable, that, after the making of this order by the court, the administrator would so neglect to provide for the support and comfort of his aged mother-in-law, as to furnish any just ground of complaint against him, or to require any action on the part of the Selectmen.

The widow Joanna Tuck died "14: 12 mo: 1673" [14 Feb. 1674], just four months after the above order of the court was made.

An inventory of the goods and chattels belonging to her late husband's estate, which had been in her hands, and were left at her decease, was taken by Henry Dow and Thomas Marston, Feb. 26th, twelve days after her death, and amounted to £29 11s. 0d.

Ensigne John Samborne, Administrator to Robert Tuck, of Hampton made oath to ye truth of this Inventorie & iff more appeare he will add it herevnto. Taken before ye court at Salisbury Aprill ye 14th 1674.

By referring to the decree of the county court made in April, 1665, for the distribution of Robert Tuck's estate among his heirs, as given on a former page, it will appear that the whole income of the estate during the natural life of his widow was to inure to her benefit; and at her decease, distribution was to be made of what remained of the estate. That time had now come: the widow was dead; what remained of her late husband's estate had been ascertained; his two daughters with their husbands were still living and were near at hand, and his grandson, John Tuck, had lately attained his majority, and his lawsuit against his grandfather's estate had recently been decided and settled.

Robert Tuck, however, one of the heirs, the son who had not accompanied his parents in their emigration, still resided in England, and, probably, never came to America. But at this time he appeared, by his son William Tuck, whom he had constituted his lawful attorney, with ample authority to make a full and final settlement of all claims, whatever the nature of them, that he had in law or equity against the estate of his father, the late Robert Tuck, of Hampton, deceased.

To render this Letter of Attorney available to William Tuck on his arrival in New England, it would be necessary for him to be able to establish his identity. Accordingly, testimony was given before an appropriate tribunal in England, by several of his acquaintances ; and he was furnished by that tribunal with the following document properly signed and sealed.

When William Tuck arrived in New England, he must soon have learned, that an order of the county court made soon after his grandfather's decease had virtually postponed the full settlement of his estate during the lifetime of his widow, for so long it was to remain in the hands of the administrator for her benefit. This fact may have led him to dispose of his father's interest as soon as a purchaser could be found. Before the death of the widow, a bargain was made with his uncles, John Samborne and John Sherburne. What sum was to be paid to him, I do not know. For the faithful performance of his part of the contract, he gave a bond in the penal sum of 120 pounds in current money of New England.

ADMINISTRATOR'S SETTLEMENT WITH JOHN TUCK.

On the 25th day of February, 1673-4, John Samborne, as administrator of the estate of Robert Tuck, conveyed by deed to John Tuck, one of the heirs, certain tracts of land and commonage, which (together with several articles of personal property of small value) the latter accepted as a full settlement of all his claims against his grandfather Tuck's estate. The property conveyed is described in the deed as follows, viz.:

y^e^ right to one share in all y^e^ lande granted at y^e^ nue plantac̃on [New Plantation], being y^e^ 3^d^ p^rt^ of one hundred acres w^th^ y^e^ appurtenances therevnto belonging: And all y^e^ right of one share in y^e^ north division, being to y^e^ quantity of 26 acres of land, more or lesse, as it is layd out in y^e^ sd North division toward Pas-cattaqua: y^e^ sd share of com̄onage w^th^ all y^e^ rights thervnto belonging.

On receiving this deed, John Tuck gave to John Samborne, the administrator, the following acquittance:

from the administrator; and these two men—each of them, undoubtedly, acting for himself and his wife—made the following

No. 5.

EDWARD[2] (Robert[1]), b. in England (the time not known); emigrated with his parents and sisters; m. about 1648, Mary, dau. of Thomas Philbrick, sen., who had settled in Hampton not long before; and after his marriage, he probably continued to reside with his parents, or settled on some part of his father's estate. He died intestate, April 6, 1652.

Children:

6. i. EDWARD,[3] b. Sept. 8, 1649; d. young. He was living on the 12th of April, 1653, when a decree of court was made for the distribution of his father's estate; but died before the 11th of April, 1665, when a decree was made concerning his grandfather's estate.

+7. ii. JOHN,[3] b. in 1651, or 1652.

At the Hampton Court, 5: 8 mo. (Oct.): 1652, Mary Tuck was appointed administratrix of the estate of her late husband, Edward Tuck, deceased.

Inventory of the estate of Edward Tuck, deceased, as sworn to by John Cass, 14: 4 mo. (June): 1653. £61—10s—6d.

The real estate appraised, as follows:

The house and land adjoining,	£14 0s 0d
4 1-2 acres fresh meadow,	9—0—0
10 " salt marsh,	2–10—0
[Commonage],	2—0—0
	£27–10—0

It is ordered by this court, that the two children of Edward Tuck, of Hampton, late deceased, to witt Edward Tuck y^e^ eldest & Jn^o^ Tuck, ye youngest, shall haue out of their father's estate the full some [sum] of forty pound (forty marke to the eldest & & twenty marke to the youngest) :* and the say'd children shall haue, for part of y^e^ forty pound, the house & all y^e^ lands, meadow & upland & comonage exprest in the Inventory, and att the same price as is ther vnder the Aprisers hands, viz: The house & the land adioyning therevnto att fourteen pound, fower acres of ffresh marsh & a halfe att nine pound; tenn acres of salt marsh att two pound ten shillings & comonage att two pound & the other twelve pound in good younge cattle: to be prizd by two indifferent men; The portions of y^e^ s^d^ childeren shalbe delivered vnto y^m^ att y^e^ age of one and twenty years:

The widow Mary Tuck married 2d, James Wall, of Hampton, widower, whose residence at that time was on the house lot lying next north of Robert Tuck's. By him she had two children, both daughters. He died Oct. 3, 1659. She outlived him, remaining his widow more than 40 years. Her children by James Wall were:

1. Mary, b. Jan. 8, 1656; m. John Marston.
2. Hannah, b. March 17, 1658; m. Benjamin Moulton.

The children of Edward Tuck appear to have been under their mother's care; the elder, who died in childhood, till his death; and the younger till he was apprenticed to learn a trade. She probaby fulfilled the conditions of the court's decree in regard to the education of her children.

About the time when John Tuck reached his majority, he had a lawsuit with the administrator of his grandfather's estate, which was tried at the Salisbury term of the county court, held April 8, 1673. The nature of the case is shown, and the result of the trial given in the Records of the court, as follows:

John Tuck, sone & heire to Edward Tuck of Hampton, deceased, w^{ch} Edward Tuck was the Sone of Robert Tuck of Hampton, deceased, pltf., against Jno. Samborne as Administrato^{r} to ye sd Robert Tucke, deceased, in an acc̃on of y^{e} case for y^{t} y^{e} sd Robert Tuck before or at his Death, nor yet ye Administrato^{r} to y^{e} sd Robert Tuck's estate since his death, did not, and have not fulfilled nor p^{r}formed y^{e} engagem^{t} of y^{e} sd Robert w^{ch} hee made vnto Mary Philbrick, daughter of Thomas Philbrick of Hampton, deceased, w^{ch} was y^{t} hee would giue & confirme upon [unto] y^{e} sd Edward Tuck, his sone, who was father to y^{e} p^{r}sent plaintiff, y^{e} one halfe of his lands w^{ch} hee, y^{e} sd Robert, had in Hampton, w^{ch} p^{r}mise was made as an encouragem^{t}, or Joynture for to moue & p^{r}swade y^{e} sd Mary, y^{e} mother of y^{e} sd plaintiff, to marrie wth y^{e} sd Edward, y^{e} plaintiff's father, after w^{ch} p^{r}mise, or encour-

Mr. Tuck owned a considerable quantity of real estate, and was to some extent engaged in the cultivation of his land. By trade, however, he was a carpenter. How largely he worked at his trade, does not appear. He invested capital in building mills, which in some instances he also operated. Possibly, he changed his employment somewhat from the ordinary business of a carpenter, working rather as a millwright. In some way, certainly, whatever it may have been, he became very much interested in building and owning mills. This fact rests not on tradition alone—the town records furnish ample proof.

At a town meeting held on the 17th of September, 1686, the following vote was passed:

> Upon the motion of John Tuck to the Town, the Town have acted by vote to grant to him liberty to set up a grist and fulling mill upon Nilus River; and to make convenient Dam or Dams for the same, provided he shall not draw down water to damnifie any man in their hay time, in any of their meadows that lay below upon that river, upon the penaltie of one hundred pounds; and that the said mills be built and finished within two years after the date hereof; or otherwise this grant be void, and to remain to the town as formerly.

Nilus River (or Brook) has its principal sources in Alder Meadow, a large tract of springy land lying partly in Hampton, and partly in North Hampton, and runs easterly and southerly till it flows into Meadow Pond—a considerable body of water a little distance back from the seashore. At the time of this grant, what is now the bed of the pond was a tract of wet land covered with grass and bushes, through which the river ran, and passed on into (or through) the Spring Marsh, retaining the same name. The pond was formed by an inundation of the sea, occasioned by a remarkably high tide, in February, 1724. The outlet of the pond now bears a different name.

Mr. Tuck, having built a grist-mill, probably found the supply of water insufficient for the two mills at the same dam, and thought it best to build the fulling mill farther up the Nilus. He accordingly asked permission from the town, and on the 14th of November, 1689, his request having been considered, the following vote was passed:

> Liberty is granted unto John Tuck to make a damm where Nilus comes out of Hasica [Hassocky] meadow: and to sett up a fulling mill; provided it be fitt to goe and full cloth within two years after the date hereoff: And say'd [Tuck] is not to full, or draw down water, in hay time to doe damage; or els this grant to be voide and to Remaine to the Towne againe.

The first of these dams (the one authorized in 1686) was built near the dividing line between the upland and the meadow lying inside of the beach-hill (now west of the pond). It occupied nearly the same site as the dam on which "Leavitt's mill," built about sixty years ago, now stands, a few rods above the "Nook Road," leading to the North Beach. The other dam, granted for a fulling mill in 1689, was located a mile or more farther up the Nilus. The fulling mill built there remained many years. At length the mill was neglected, the dam went to ruin, and the fall was not again utilized till 1867, when a new dam was made, and a shingle mill built and operated on the same site, a little west of the highway leading from the schoolhouse, in District No. 1, to Little River Village.

After Mr. Tuck had built his two mills on separate dams, he still found that in some seasons there was an inadequate supply of water. The principal sources of Nilus River, as already mentioned, were in Alder Meadow, a large tract of springy ground lying between the "Twelve Shares" and the road leading from Hampton to Rye "four corners." But the water from the springs in this meadow had another outlet besides the Nilus, running northerly into Little River near the (at present) lower sawmill on that stream. By building a dam across this outlet, nearly all the water from the meadow would be turned into the Nilus, thus increasing considerably the water power at each of the mills below.

There was still another way of enhancing the value of one of the mills, the grist-mill which was at some distance below the other. About forty rods north of the "Nook" road are several springs—one of them a bountiful spring—from which flowed a stream often called the "Nook Run," the chief source of Dow's River, then a tributary of the Nilus, but now an inlet to the Meadow Pond. By building an inexpensive dam across the outlet of these springs, and digging a suitable ditch from some point above the dam to the mill pond at the gristmill, the water from the springs might easily be turned into this pond, and thus the mill would be increased in value. A request to the town for permission to make these improvements was considered and acted upon at a meeting of the "freeholders and commoners," Dec. 29, 1729, and the result recorded, as follows:

Granted unto John Tuck Liberty so far as the Town hath a Right to grant, to turn the springs nere whare Thomas Sleeper dwelt; and also the springs y^{t} are att Alder-meadow in [into] his pond where his Grist mill stands for the tarme [term] of twenty years, on condition the said Tuck improve all opportunity of Grinding the Town corn for the sixteenth part thereof, and that the said John Tuck shall Ingage for to grind three days in a week when there is watter and after y^{e} 20 years above mentioned are determined, if y^e^ Town do farther grant said springs, y^e^ said John Tuck shall have y^e^ offer on as easy Tearmes [terms] as any other person.

Mr. Tuck availed himself of the liberty thus given, and built the two dams needed. The one across the northern outlet of Alder Meadow was called the little dam, and although the dam itself has long been gone, the land in that vicinity is still called by that name. The locality where the other dam was built is now called Spring-heads. The dam itself (still in part kept up) is called the foot-dam.

Dea. Tuck was a diligent reader of the Bible; and he read it through in course no less than twelve times, between the 13th of February, 1677, and the 21st of May, 1715—as appears from his diary. After the first reading is the following entry:

The 13th day of February, 1677, I began to Reade y^e^ Bible through and I Read it all through from y^e^ 1st chapter of Gennesis to y^e^ last chapter of Revelations: by y^e^ 18^th^ day of December, 1679. JOHN TUCKE.

After each of the different readings (with a single exception) Dea. Tuck made an entry stating the time of finishing, accompanying the statement with some passage from the Bible. The entry, after having read the eighth time, is given as a specimen:

Having omitted y^e^ setting down y^e^ 7^th^ time of reading y^e^ Bible through, I now sett down y^e^ 8^th^ time of reading y^e^ holy bible y^e^ 30^th^ of y^e^ 9^th^ month, 1701.

"My little children, these things I write unto you y^t^ y^e^ sin not: And if any man sin, Wee haue an aduocate with y^e^ ffather, Jesus Christ y^e^ Righteous." 1. John, 2 chap. 1^st^ v.

Under date of May 22, 1715, he writes that he then began to read the Bible through for the thirteenth time, but does not remark further in regard to it.

Mr. Tuck and his wife Bethia united with the church on the 28th day of February, 1696–7, about seven weeks after their marriage. He was chosen a Deacon of the church, July 19, 1715, in place of Dea. Samuel Dow, deceased, and held the office till death, more than twenty-seven years.

Dea. Tuck was highly esteemed both for his ability and his integrity, and he was often chosen to fill important offices in the town. He was a Selectman ten years, viz.: in 1680, '82, '87, '88, '94, '98 ; 1700, '11, '16, '17. July 5, 1714, he was chosen Town Clerk to fill a vacancy occasioned by the death of Dea. Samuel Dow, and was retained in the office till March 10, 1730, about fifteen years and eight months. He was twice elected a Deputy to represent the town in the General Assembly of the province; yet the time of his actual service as a member was in each case very brief. He was first chosen for the assembly begun and holden at New Castle on the 16th of September, 1696. The assembly met at the same place by adjournment on the 19th, and in Hampton by prorogation on the 22nd, and by adjournments on the 23d and 24th of the same month. On the last of these days the assembly was dissolved by Lt. Gov. Usher, after having been in session only five days.

It does not appear that Dea. Tuck was again chosen to represent the town in the General Assembly at any time during the next twenty years. He was a member of the assembly whose first meeting was held in Portsmouth on the 13th of May, 1717. The other members from Hampton were Col. Joseph Smith and Maj. Peter Weare.

Samuel Shute was the governor of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, having his residence in Boston. George Vaughan was lieutenant governor of New Hampshire. Gov. Shute was present and presided at the council-board during the session of the General Assembly, which lasted only seven days. On the 20th of May he prorogued the assembly to the 24th of September following, and soon after returned to Boston.

The General Assembly met at the appointed time, September 24th, the lieutenant governor presiding at the council-board. He told the council that Gov. Shute had directed him to prorogue the assembly to the second day of the following month. He then sent for the House of Representatives to go up to the council chamber; but instead of proroguing the assembly, as Gov. Shute had directed, he dissolved it. As one result of this impolitic act, Dea. Tuck and his colleagues (the other depnties from Hampton) were involved in troubles.

It appears that before this there had been a difference of opinion, and probably some discussion—not to use the harsher term contention—between the governor and the lieutenant governor, as to the power of the latter, and the manner in which it was to be used when the former was in Massachusetts. Gov. Shute claimed, that after he had published his commission in each government, and been qualified by taking the oaths prescribed, he held the power of governing both provinces, when he was in either, or, as he averred, whenever he was in America; but when he was out of New Hampshire his orders were to be carried into effect by the lieutenant governor. Lt. Gov. Vaughan held that whenever the governor was out of New Hampshire, the powers of government in this province vested wholly in himself, and that he became governor, de facto.

When Gov. Shute learned that his order to the lieutenant governor to prorogue the General Assembly to the second day of October had been disregarded, he appears to have given notice that the assembly would meet on that day, notwithstanding its dissolution by Lt. Gov. Vaughan. At the time appointed, the council met, Gov. Shute being present and presiding. All the members of the lower house also met, except the three from Hampton. These, whatever they may have thought of the policy of the lieutenant governor, held that, in dissolving the General Assembly he had not transcended the power vested in him, and consequently that the dissolution was a valid and final act. Holding such views, they considered themselves as no longer representatives of their town, and that they could become such only by a new election. These views they appear to have made known, in an informal way, to those gentlemen with whom they had been associated in the assembly.

The speaker of the house gave notice to the governor and council of the absence of Dea. Tuck and his colleagues, and of their refusal to sit as members of the house unless there should be a new election in all the towns. The house also passed a vote and sent it up to the council, requesting the governor to send a precept to Hampton for assembly men to be chosen instead of Dea. Tuck and his colleagues, who had refused to serve.

Such a precept was accordingly sent to Hampton; a town meeting was held and the same persons were again chosen to represent the town ; and a vote was passed expressing the views of the freeholders of the town relative to the subject. An attested copy of this vote was the next day sent to the House of Representatives, and with it another paper signed by Dea. Tuck and his colleagues in the assembly dissolved by Lt. Gov. Vaughan, and addressed to the gentlemen with whom they had been associated as representatives.

THE VOTE OF THE FREEHOLDERS.

At a Legall meeting of y^e^ freeholders of y^e^ town of Hampton, the 7th of y^e^ 8th mo: 1717, after having chosen a moderator, the freeholders Voted That whereas Wee y^e^ town of Hampton did elect Coll. Joseph Smith, Maj. Peter Wear & Mr. John Tuck our Representatives to sitt in y^e^ late Generall Assembly, which Assembly was dissolved by his Maj'tys Lt. Gov^r^ Vaughan, as appears to us of Records: And now having Rec'd a precept from his Excellency Gov^r^ Shute, for a new choice to joyn y^e^ sd Assembly, dismist as above said; In answer to which we say: If y^e^ Representatives of our Town are dismist, the whole are dismist. And wee humbly declare wee are of opinion not to joyn Assembly men with such as are not legally chosen & qualified.

Test. Jn^o^ Tuck
Town Clerk.

The paper signed by the representatives dismissed is in the words following:

Pro: N. Hamp^r^.

To the members of the late House of Representatives for said Province:

Gent^n^,—The words in the King's Commission to His Excellency Col. Shute appears to us very plain (viz:), that when the Gov^{r} is absent out of the Province, then his Hon^{r} the Lt. Gov^{r} is authorized and impowered to execute the powers contained therein untill y^{e} Govern^{rs} return into said Province: Now it is most certain y^{e} Gov^{r} was not in this Province the 24th day of Septemb^{r} last past, when the Lt. Gov^{r} dissolved the Genl. Assembly.

Gent^{n},—Were there any room to dispute y^{e} legality of the dissolution, and it should appear as illegal, yet sure notwithstanding that inasmuch as there was no adjournm^{t} of the house, you must necessarily as such cease to be; & in our opinion cannot wthout dishonour to the Crown, imposition on the people and danger to y^{r}selves be capable of acting again, wthout a new election & new qualifications of the whole house; So that we, the subscribers, being now chosen by his Excellency y^{e} Gov^{rs} p^{r}cept, thereby implicitly confirming our opinion, that you are not looked upon as a House of Representatives—We count it not safe for us to act wth you as you were on y^{e} 24 of Sept. last dissolved, untill new elected and qualifyed legally.

8br. 7th, 1717. Gent^{n}, We subscribe o^{r}selves y^{r} hum: serv^{ts},

Jos. Smith,
Peter Wear,
Jn^{o} Tuck.

Both of these papers were sent up from the lower house to the governor and council, by whom they were taken into consideration, and it was ordered that Messrs. Smith, Wear and Tuck should appear before them and be examined separately in regard to the paper by them subscribed. This was done accordingly, and the three men having been examined separately were allowed to retire. In the afternoon session, "His Excellency the Gov^{r} and Councill having considered" the case, again "ordered that they be brought to the Councill board." On their appearance there, the following vote of council was read to them:

IN COUNCILL.

Whereas, a libel has been drawn up and signed by Joseph Smith and Peter Wear, Esqs. and Deacon Jn^{o} Tuck, w^{ch} was read to the free-hold^{rs} of Hampton in a publick meeting appointed for electing three other members in the room of the s^{d} Joseph Smith & Peter Wear, Esqs., & Deacon Jn^{o} Tuck, who were not dismis^{t}* the house as they do in said libel falsely insinuate; but bec. [because ?] they themselves refused to act or sett in said Assem^{b} then mett; and whereas the s^{d} libel they afterwards sent to the low^{r} house, w^{ch} by them was sent to y^{e} Councill, who having fully examined the matter:

Voted, That the s^{d} libel reflects highly on the goverm^{t}, is false and scandalous, and was handed ab^{t} only to stir up sedition and tumult in this his Maj^{ties} Prov: of New Hamp^{r}; and also that the said Joseph Smith, Peter Wear, Esqs., & Deacon Jn^{o} Tuck, do enter into bonds wth sureties of four hundred pounds each, to answer what shall be alleged agst them, in relation to these matters, when they shall be summoned to appear to answer y^{m}to, before the Gov^{r} and Councill, and to be of good behaviour, paying fees, and in case they refuse, to stand committed.

8^{br} 8th, 1717.

The sheriff took bonds of them accordingly.

Mr. Tuck and his wife Tabitha were admitted to the church May 24, 1741, and February 17, 1742, he was chosen Deacon as successor to his father, who had died a few weeks before, and he held the office till death, almost thirty-nine years. He was a Selectman eight years, 1734, '39, '42, '45, '48, '63, '64, '65; was twice chosen to represent the town in the General Assembly—the first time February 12, 1753, for somewhat more than two years, to fill a vacancy; the second time for the term of three years, the length of time for which representatives were then chosen.

Dea. Tuck was a well-informed and influential man. He is said to have been distinguished for his extensive and remarkably accurate geographical knowledge. He was also noted for his eccentricities. Having inherited, besides the paternal homestead and other real estate, the grist-mill on Nilus Brook, built by his father many years before, he was himself the miller. The mill was about two miles and a half from his residence as the roads then were. He owned a white horse, which is said to have grown old in his service, and which was well known to all the people living along the route. This horse he was accustomed to take with him, day after day, as he went to the mill, not ordinarily to avoid the fatigue of walking, for he seldom rode, but to be used as a pack-horse to carry upon its back the bags of corn and grain that the people wished to send to the mill, and to take back the meal to the several owners on his way home. This service was performed gratuitously, and was a great accommodation to the people.

There were times, however—not perhaps very frequent—when he would not thus accommodate, nor even deign to notice any one as he passed to his mill. When the "odd fit" was on him he seemed oblivious of every thing around him. The people perceived it almost intuitively, and at such times asked no favors. It is a tradition concerning him that women, wishing to send a small bag of grain to the mill, were accustomed to go to their doors and watch his approach, being able to tell by his gait whether or not he had a "Tuck spell." If he had, they shut their doors without a word; if not, they easily obtained a favor.

Dea. Tuck was a man of mark in the town, as has been stated, and with his father filled continuously for about sixty-seven years, the office of deacon, which in those days was next in dignity to that of the minister; and as, during those years, Revs. Nathaniel Gookin, Ward Cotton and Ebenezer Thayer, all able men, were ministers of the place, there can be no question that these two deacons in their day were highly esteemed by the people.

It is traditional in Hampton that a somewhat singular plan was agreed upon by Dea. Jonathan Tuck and Rev. Ward Cotton, his pastor, for checking the latter, who was a very excitable man, whenever he might be (as sometimes happened) so worked up in preaching that his fervor was liable to be mistaken for anger. To show the plan clearly it should be stated that it was customary for the deacons of the church to occupy, during the hours of religious service, a pew or seat known as the deacons' seat, directly in front of the pulpit, but much below it, where they sat facing the congregation. The plan was for Dea. Tuck, whenever he found the pastor becoming too much excited, to strike his shoe against the wall of the pew in front of him. The signal, when given, never failed to produce the effect intended.

Mr. Tuck, having graduated in 1723, studied for the ministry, but under whose instruction I am not informed. I think, however, I do not hazard much in suggesting that he was probably guided in his theological studies by the sound judgment and the wise counsels of Rev. Nathaniel Gookin, the talented, judicious and beloved pastor of the church in his native town, than whom it would have been difficult to find a more competent instructor. Under his ministry he had grown up from early boyhood; of his church Mr. Tuck's parents were members more than a quarter of a century, and his father during many years an officer.

I have not ascertained how early Mr. Tuck began his ministry. In 1729 he was engaged in preaching in Chester, N. H., a place then recently settled; and on the 10th of June, at a meeting of the proprietors, it was Voted: "That Mr. John Tuck, of Hampton, is chosen to settle wth y^{e} Inhabitants of Chester in y^{e} work of y^{e} Ministry." It was also voted that "120 Pounds be Raised for y^{e} support of y^{e} Gospel Ministry by y^{e} Inhabitants and prop^{rs} [proprietors] according to their settlement for five years ensuing, and then be Raised as the law directs."

A committee was chosen to communicate the votes to Mr. Tuck, and invite him to the work of the ministry in Chester. The committee having performed the duties assigned them, received from Mr. Tuck the following reply :

Hampton, Oct. 7th, 1729.

To the propr's of y^e^ town of Chester this day met at Capt. Wingate's in Hampton:

Gentlemen,

Whereas you w^th^ the freeholders of the town of Chester Did some time ago Invite me to y^e^ work of y^e^ Ministry in y^e^ town of Chester; now these are to Signify that for Weighty Reasons I Decline settling there. I wish you a happy settlement in God's good time. This from

Your Hum^ble^ Ser^vt^

Jo^n^ Tucke.

The proprietors at their meeting at Capt. Wingate's the same day, " Voted, Mr. John Tuck be paid thirty shillings per Sabbath for 14 Sabbaths last past."*

In his communication to the proprietors of Chester, it may be noticed that Mr. Tuck simply states that he declines their call " for weighty reasons." It appears to me not improbable that his acquaintance with some of the inhabitants of the Isles of Shoals, and his knowledge of the spiritual wants of that people, may have led him to regard it as his duty to devote his time and his energies to the improvement of their social and religious condition ; and that this sense of duty may have been one of those " weighty reasons." Be this as it may, we find him not long afterward laboring among the people of the islands as their minister, and his ministry among them continued till the close of life.

Isles of Shoals is the name given to a cluster of small islands, seven or eight in number, lying in the Atlantic ocean, ten or twelve miles from Hampton Beach, in a direction a little north of east. They consist mainly of rock, covered in many places with a thin coat of earth, though there is but little soil fit for cultivation. These islands were discovered in 1614 by Capt. John Smith, who named them "Smith's Isles," in honor of himself; but that name was not long retained, and at an early date they began to be called as they now are, Isles of Shoals, or, in a familiar way, "The Shoals."

When discovered these islands had a very inhospitable appearance, and they would probably have long remained uninhabited, had it not been for the facilities that they afforded for carrying on successfully the fishing business. These advantages were readily seen, and they attracted settlers at a very early period; and for more than a century the islands had a population of from three hundred to six hundred people. A meeting-house is said to have been built on Hog Island,* the largest of the group, as early as 1641. A meeting-house was built on Star Island early in the eighteenth century. The latter island, together with White Island, Londoners, and a part of Cedar Island, lies in New Hampshire, and was incorporated as a town, December 24, 1715.

Several men had from time to time performed ministerial labor on these islands, but no one of them had been a pastor of the church before the year 1732. In the summer of that year, Mr. John Tuck, having received and accepted a call, was on the 26th of July regularly installed pastor of the church at Gosport. Rev. Jabez Fitch, of Portsmouth, preached the ordination sermon from Matthew 4: 19—"I will make you fishers of men." His salary was £110 a year. He also received £50 towards a house.

Mr. Tuck labored among his people not only as a minister of the gospel, but as their physician. One writer says of him: "He was esteemed a good man and a devoted minister." Rev. Jonathan French, D.D., of North Hampton, writes in relation to him: "It is said that Mr. Tucke was furnished with a large library, and was, notwithstanding his isolated situation, extensively acquainted with the affairs of his times."

Mr. Tuck's views in regard to the Great Awakening in the time of Whitfield are given in a communication from him to a convention of ministers assembled in Boston in July, 1743, to consider the subject. He writes:

> Providence is now sending sickness into my family, so that I cannot be in Boston this week; I therefore send my thoughts in writing. I acknowledge the work in this land to be a blessed work of God; and I believe it is the duty of Christ's ministers to give an open, conjunct testimony unto it. We have a revival of religion among us. I beg your prayers for my family, my people and myself. I am with all due regards,

Mr. Tuck died August 12, 1773, æt. 70 years, 11 months and 9 days (not 72, as in the inscription on his monument), and was buried on Star Island (Gosport). A monumental slab of freestone was erected to his memory in 1800, on which is the following inscription:

* This child, Joseph T. Lake, Jr., at his birth was a small, puny infant, weighing only six and three-fourths pounds. He grew very rapidly. When one year old he was remarkable for size and strength, and for intellectual development. At five years of age he weighed one hundred and thirty pounds, his mind being as mature as that of a child of twice his years. He was very fond of reading, and had a remarkable memory.

His parents had many applications from persons who wished to travel with him for the purpose of exhibiting him. To such an arrangement they did not consent. Sometimes, however, they took him to some fair for two or three days. He very much enjoyed travelling, and was very fond of company. As he grew older he became an object of attraction, people coming from a considerable distance to see him.

He continued to increase in size and strength, and at the age of twelve years and ten months he weighed three hundred and eighty-five pounds—being tall and well proportioned, a fine scholar, and a very interesting boy. At that time he went to Milford, in Hillsborough County, to attend a County Fair. After an absence of only a few days, he returned home, sick with typhoid fever, and died after a sickness of four days.

Strong as were his attachments to all his friends, he was perfectly reconciled to die, and passed away as calmly as any person of mature years. He was very remarkable in many respects, having a pleasant and happy disposition, and being also a very conscientious child.

He engaged in teaching in the winter season, and read law for a while with the late Hon. Thomas Robinson, of Ellsworth, Hancock Co., Maine, and closed his law studies with the late Joseph A. Wood, Esq., of the same place, and was admitted to the bar in October, 1839.

Mr. Tuck went into practice in the town of Sedgwick, Hancock Co., in 1840, and the next year was elected a member of the Legislature, which convened in January, 1842. In March of that year he was appointed attorney for Hancock County, and resigned his seat in the House. He held this office till 1845, when he received from the governor the appointment of Judge of Probate for the same county. Subsequently that office was made elective, and he was chosen to fill it, and he has been chosen at every election since held, and he is still in the office, making thirty-two years continuous service, and three years or more of the present term still remain.

His appointment to this important office by the governor, and these repeated elections to the same office by the people, clearly indicate that great confidence is felt in Judge Tuck's ability and integrity, and that he has shown himself worthy of their confidence.

She arrived home early in September, where she died in the fall of 1870.

+307. iii. EDWARD M.,[8] b. in 1840.

Edward Tuck, the eldest son of Jesse Tuck by his second wife, Sally (Watson) Tuck, was born in Fayette, Kennebec County, Me., as has already been stated. He remained with his parents, working on their farm till he was twenty-one years old, having received such education as could be gained from the common schools of a new town, and an attendance for two terms at the Academy in Farmington, Me.

Soon after attaining his majority, he left his early home to seek his fortune in another State. He went to Lowell, Mass., in 1828, only four years after its incorporation as a distinct town, when the whole number of its inhabitants did not probably exceed four thousand. During his first year there he was employed by Mr. S. A. Coburn, in his hotel. He then spent a year in one of the factories, after which he was in trade till 1838; then went into the express business, which proved a success, and he continued in the business seventeen years, but sold out his interest in 1855.

Since 1855 Mr. Tuck has been acting as a broker, doing business in Boston, while he retained his residence in Lowell. He is still a broker, yet he finds time to attend to various other matters in which he has an interest. For fifteen years he has been president of the Old Lowell National Bank; and the prosperous condition of that institution evinces judicious management on the part of its managers. Mr. Tuck at the same time has been, and still is, one of the directors of the Traders' and Mechanics' Insurance Company, and also of the Lowell & Lawrence Railroad.

To fill these offices well, to attend to his business in Boston as a broker, and return, requiring daily fifty miles travel by railroad or more, and to take proper care of his own private business, necessitates that Mr. Tuck should be not only a very busy, but also a very methodical man.

To this sketch I will append an article clipped from a Lowell newspaper, printed in 1872, in which, in an off-hand way, the writer brings out some traits and habits which have contributed largely to Mr. Tuck's success in life.

Probably there is no man in Lowell who has been over the Boston & Lowell Railroad as many times as has Edward Tuck, president of the (Old) Lowell National Bank. He commenced the express business between this city (Lowell) and Boston in 1838; and from that time to the present, though long since out of his original calling, he has vibrated back and forth with remarkable regularity. Rain or shine, every day of the week excepting Sundays and holidays, he may be found on his way to Boston, usually on the 9½ train; returning in the 2½. His companion down is the Boston Post; returning, the Transcript; and unless some friend takes a seat by his side to converse, he quietly absorbs his papers, giving special attention to the financial and commercial departments.

Though by no means seeking the reputation of a story-teller, or retailer of good jokes, he usually has the last best thing going for one's entertainment (notwithstanding his face, as he studies his newspapers, would be a splendid reputation and recommendation for a first-class deacon), and it is not remembered that he has ever been fairly "sold." He knows how stocks are selling, remembers the last quotation of gold, the rate of foreign exchange, and the standing of business men generally "within the reach of his cable-tow" (which is a figurative expression without meaning, supposed to refer to the Atlantic Cable).

He has seen Lowell grow up from a city of some 16,000 to that of more than 45,000;* and during the same time Boston has undergone changes as wonderful as were wrought by Aladdin and his magic lamp. He has been favored with places of honor and trust, and has served his fellow citizens faithfully. As an evidence of his methodical manner of life, it may be added that

* If the whole time of Mr. Tuck's residence in Lowell (1828—1877) should be considered, it would probably be not far from the truth to say that he has seen Lowell grow up from a town of about 4,000 inhabitants to a city of more than 51,000, the population now being nearly thirteen times as great as it was in 1828.

although he has thus gone on, day after day, week after week, month after month, year after year, for thirty-five years, in all the time he has never been "left" in consequence of being too late for the train! We don't believe one can name his equal in constant, faithful, uninterrupted fidelity to a business in the two cities twenty-six miles apart. The name of the business men to whom he is known, here and there, would fill a good sized directory; and among them all, his word is as good as his bond, and his bond is as good as gold. And our sentiment is—"Here's to his good health—may he live long and prosper."

J. Warren Tuck, son of Jeremiah Tuck, of Kensington, and Ruth (Woodman) Tuck, of Candia, N. H., was born August 7, 1823, in Fayette, Maine, to which place his parents had emigrated in early life. His youth was passed in the usual manner upon his father's farm, in laborious occupation, with such advantages only of education as are incident to the sons of New England farmers. But the aspiration for something higher and better, which has in so many instances influenced the children of intelligent parents rearing their families in obscure localities, was early awakened in young Warren, and at the age of sixteen he began to leave his home in winter for the advantage of attending a high school in a neighboring village. By constant and untiring diligence and industry, he in this manner soon qualified himself to become a teacher, and for several years taught winter schools, spending the summers in work on his father's farm.

His father sympathized with him in his noble purpose and in the efforts he was making to accomplish it, but yet was unable to do for him much more than leave him at liberty to exercise his own powers as best he might, without parental restraint. The son attended school for some time, and as constantly as his self-acquired means would enable him, at the Maine Wesleyan Seminary at Readfield, Me., until, after many struggles, he had become fitted for college.

The death of a brother, and unavoidable delay consequent thereupon, compelled him to abandon the cherished hope of a collegiate education, and he was induced to accept a flattering situation in the public schools of Hallowell, Maine. Undecided as to his ultimate vocation in life, he devoted his leisure hours for some time to the study of law, and also to the study of medicine ; finally settling down, however, into the purpose of following the occupation of a teacher. He made a special study of elocution, and possessed rare ability in transferring to his pupils the enthusiasm which he himself felt in this branch of culture, and the effect of his instruction and example in this regard has been manifest in eloquent words spoken from pulpit, bar and platform.

In 1850 Mr. Tuck was appointed usher in the Washington School, Roxbury, Mass. He was married at Boston, May 27, 1851, to Phronia S. Norris, of Mount Vernon, Me. He took high rank as a teacher, and years after was several times called to serve upon the school board of Roxbury. His success in Massachusetts led to his being invited to become Principal of the Model School of New Britain in connection with the Normal School of Connecticut. After four years of successful service in New Britain, he was induced to become connected with the Boston schools for one year, and then concluded to accept an offer of business engagement, and give up permanently the occupation to which he had applied himself with marked success for fifteen years.

He first became connected with the "Safe and Bank Lock" business, with which he united, in 1861, the "Ornamental Iron Works," making his home at Boston Highlands. In 1867 he returned to New Britain, Conn., where he now resides, filling the position of treasurer and business manager of the Union Manufacturing Company, and where his labors have been crowned with success.

Native force of character, developed by the necessities of early and mature life; manly uprightness and integrity, illustrated in every position, have enabled Mr. Tuck to make his mark wherever he has been known, and to achieve as well a gratifying degree of business success as eminent position in religious, social and civil life.

and Martha (Fogg) Tucke, was born, as stated in the account of his father's family, August 31, 1825, in Kensington, N. H. He studied at the Rockingham Academy in Hampton Falls, and at Phillips Exeter Academy, 1839–1842; entered the freshmen class in Harvard College in 1842; passed the usual four years, and left in 1846, and afterward received the degree of Bachelor of Arts.

After leaving college, he read law and taught school awhile; then learned the machinist trade, and became practically a civil and mechanical engineer; learned at Exeter the business of making but-welded wrought iron gas-pipe, and is said to have been the first native born American that learned the art.

When the war broke out in the Spring of 1861, he was in North Carolina. Differing in politics with the more violent, he was imprisoned for awhile. On the 10th of June, 1861, he joined Company E, 2d N. C. cavalry; was in various battles and skirmishes, and was captured by the Union troops near Hanover, Pa., on the Tarrytown road; was well treated by the privates; but was finally taken to Johnson's Island as a prisoner.

He took the oath of allegiance October 3, 1863. The next year he was in the railroad department of the Army of the Cumberland; was at the siege of Nashville, Tennessee, under Gen. George H. Thomas, thirty-seven days, in very rough work.

Mr. Tucke now resides at Kingstree, Williamsburgh County, South Carolina, engaged in keeping a hotel, being at the same time a Deputy County Surveyor.

Henry Tuck, M.D., son of Jonathan and Dorothy (Webster) Tuck, was born in Kensington, N. H., February 16, 1808. Having received a common school education in his native town, and spent a few months as a student of Hampton Academy, in 1827 he entered Phillips Exeter Academy, and remained there through a three years' course. His father did not think a liberal education a necessity, and would not pay his son's expenses at Exeter, though he was willing to board him at home. So the latter paid his way there by teaching writing school evenings, and walked six miles a day back and forth between Exeter and Kensington. After leaving Phillips Academy, he taught school, among other places, in Rowley, Mass. He then studied medicine with Dr. George Hayward, of Boston, and graduated at the Harvard Medical School, in 1834, passing the last year as house-pupil at the Massachusetts General Hospital, in Boston.

On receiving his medical degree (1834), he settled in Barnstable, a town on Cape Cod, Massachusetts, where he quickly gained an extensive practice, and was held in the highest esteem as a physician and a man by the entire community in which he lived. Dr. Tuck was for several years in charge of the U. S. Marine Hospital, at Hyannis. He was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, having joined it in 1837; and of the Barnstable District Medical Society, he was President.

In the Spring of 1845, his health failed him from over-work in his profession, and he went to visit his friends in Kensington, N. H. He failed rapidly, and died there in a few weeks, of Bright's disease, June 24, 1845, æt. 37 years. He was buried in Barnstable, in the graveyard adjoining the Unitarian Church.

DEATH OF DR. HENRY TUCK.*

Impressed most deeply with the universal sadness that beclouds our village and hangs heavily at its every heart, we feel sensibly our inability to discharge appropriately our solemn duty in recording the death of our fellow citizen and friend—Dr. Henry Tuck—who died on Tuesday night, the 24th ult., at his father's residence in Kensington, N. H., at the age of thirty-seven years. His remains were brought here and interred on Friday last [June 27].

Our community has been seldom visited with a like serious calamity; and seldom, indeed, has such impressive evidence of its melancholy realization been manifested, as is observed regarding the sudden and afflictive instance in question.

* From the Barnstable Patriot, July, 1845.

Dr. Tuck was born in Kensington, and received his early education in the schools of New Hampshire. Without the advantages of a collegiate preparation, by his close application and assiduity in the study of his profession with Dr. George Hayward, of Boston, he early took place in the first rank of proficiency, and secured the approbation and patronage of the most eminent physicians and surgeons in the state.

Coming a professional stranger among us about twelve years ago, he was successful in winning the esteem and securing the confidence of our whole community to an extent and degree only to have been attained by love, so largely possessed, of the professional talent, skill and ambition, and the amiability of disposition, urbanity and courtesy of manners and faithfulness to his whole duty, and in all his intercourse—public, professional and social—which was his most fortunate endowment.

We have, with just reason, been led to regard him as a public benefactor—for we felt he could dispense all that aid and relief, in cases of physical suffering among us, which could be administered by the profession anywhere—and favored were we in his residence in our midst. His interests in the advancement of society at large, and the promotion of its good institutions; and particularly his devotedness to the progress of education with us, was creditable to his head and heart, and secured him durable remembrance with his compeers and the youthful generation around him.

A vacancy is created, a void exists, which deploring with sincere lamentations, we feel almost despairingly convinced cannot be again filled. With the sorrows of his severely afflicted family will be mingled the sincerest sympathies of all their friends, wherever his uncommon worth and their irreparable losses are appreciated.

Rev. Jeremy Webster Tuck, son of Jonathan and Dorothy (Webster) Tuck, was born in Kensington, N. H., October 8, 1811, as has already been stated. After leaving the common schools of his native town, he was for a time a student in Hampton Academy, a few miles from his home, and at the Academy at West Brattleborough, Vt. His studies preparatory for college were, however, pursued chiefly in Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. He entered the freshmen class at Amherst College in 1836, and graduated with his class in 1840.

After leaving college he was engaged for a while in teaching, as the principal of the Academy in West Brattleborough, where he had once been a pupil. He soon relinquished this position for the purpose of preparing himself for the ministry—pursuing his theological studies at the seminary in Andover, Mass., and at the Theological Institute in East Windsor, Ct. His first pastorate was in Ludlow, a town in Hampden County, Massachusetts. Having accepted a call from the Congregational church, he was ordained pastor, September 6, 1843, and retained the pastorate more than sixteen years. He was dismissed by council, December 7, 1859. He then went to Thorndike, in Waldo County, Maine, where he had a ministry of six years. He was three months in Indian Orchard, Mass., and five months at Mystic Bridge, Conn. After preaching eight months as a candidate in Jewett City, in the same state, he was installed pastor of the church, May 3, 1866. He resigned his pastorate of more than ten years, and was dismissed by council, June 28, 1876. About one year afterward, having accepted a call from the Third Congregational Church in Middletown, Conn., he was installed pastor June 21, 1877.

At the centennial celebration of the town of Ludlow, in 1874, Mr. Tuck delivered the historical address, which was published in the history of the town. Several of his sermons have also been published. Besides, he has furnished many articles for the press, as a newspaper correspondent; and in this capacity has travelled extensively, having twice crossed the continent to California; made three tours to Salt Lake City, and into the mines of Utah and the Rocky Mountains in Colorado.

H., the birth-place of both his parents, September 1, 1801, and was taken by them to Parsonsfield, Maine, in 1807, being then in his sixth year. Residing there till about eighteen years of age, enjoying such advantages for education as the common schools afforded, he then became a member of the Academy at Hampton, and qualified himself to become a teacher. Having followed this business in Winter for several years, he at length married and settled in Parsonsfield, in 1827, where he resided for twenty years as a farmer, filling at different times all the official stations which the people of the town could confer upon him, including that of Representative to the Legislature. In 1846 or 1847, he sold his farm, and removed to Biddeford, Maine, where he spent the rest of his days. He was the first Postmaster of the place, which position he held for many years, and after filling other positions of honor and responsibility, died, as Mayor of the city, in January, 1861.

He was born at Peekskill, Nov. 29, 1822; graduated at Yale College in the class of 1842; studied law with his father, with whom he became a partner in professional practice, and died as named above, Feb. 24, 1864. He was a man of superior business ability, and possessed rare and excellent qualities, which commanded universal esteem and occasioned the deepest regret at his early death among all who knew him.

Mrs. Nelson married, 2d, June 16, 1866, Orrin F. Frye, of Boston, Mass., printer, and partner in the firm of Rand, Avery & Frye. Residence in Milton, Mass., and Boston. He was born in Quincy, Mass., on the 2d of September, 1830, and died in Boston without issue, May 29, 1871.

Without pecuniary assistance from his family at the outset of his career, he early applied himself to the task of becoming a practical printer. Having learned his trade, he first tried his fortune in London, hoping for success abroad, which at that time seemed very difficult at home. Becoming soon convinced that his sphere of labor was in America, he returned home and entered the establishment of Rand & Avery, in Boston, and developing remarkable skill and taste in the art of printing, as well as ability in business, he became in due time a partner in the firm of Rand, Avery & Frye, and remained such until his death. His excellent character and high estimation called forth the highest encomiums upon his many virtues when his untimely death was announced to the public.

Mr. Tuck married, 2d, October 10, 1847, Mrs. Catharine P. Shepard, widow of John G. Shepard, and daughter of John Townsend, Esq., of Salisbury, N. H. She was born January 20, 1815, and died without issue October 10, 1876.

The following obituary notice of Mrs. Tuck is from the pen of her minister, Rev. George E. Street, pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Exeter.

OBITUARY.*

Mrs. CATHARINE P. TUCK, wife of Hon. Amos Tuck, whose death on the 10th instant was announced last week, was the daughter of John Townsend, Esq., late of Salisbury, N. H. She was born on the 20th of January, 1815, was married to Mr. Tuck and came to Exeter to reside in 1847. Except when her husband's official engagements called him to Washington and elsewhere, she has lived among us and become generally known to the people. While her natural reserve did not allow many intimate acquaintances, those to whom she did open her heart, found in her an entirely loyal and loving friend. Gifted with a clear, active mind, and with great decision of character, she was fitted to exert a commanding influence. To strength of character she added superior intelligence. The unusual facilities she enjoyed after her marriage, for travel at home and abroad, and her cultivated taste for literature, gave her a large store of knowledge, useful and beautiful, which both enriched her own life and increased her ability to confer happiness on others.

She was an ardent admirer of beauty, whether in nature, art, music or human character, and her world had become peopled with attractions for her cultured and appreciative mind. Nor was she indifferent to matters of public concern. Upon all subjects that have stirred the popular conscience or convulsed the country within the past few years, she had intelligent and deep convictions, and was ever ready on proper occasions to express her opinions. At the same time she did not lose her interest in matters specially affecting the welfare and happiness of the town, and of those with whom she was closely associated. Here at home her vivacious spirit and cordial ways and quickening impulses were a contribution to society, which cannot fail to be greatly missed by her large circle of friends and acquaintances. Of her charming home she was the acknowledged queen, while she easily took the place of waiting and watching when any member of the household needed her attention. Never has the writer seen wifely fidelity and devotion exceed hers on the occasion of her husband's late, long illness. Great as her joy was at his recovery, it was the time for her overtaxed strength to yield.

For months she had secretly combated an internal disease, the first symptoms of which appeared on last Thanksgiving day. Its progress has been steady and relentless from the first, yet her hopefulness was so great that she did not become seriously alarmed for herself till her husband was out of danger. Then she did not abandon hope till the best medical skill was baffled.

It would not be true to say that she easily let go of a world which had so many charms for her. She clung eagerly to earth and earthly loves, but as she saw no door but that of a suffering illness and death opening before her, she looked prayerfully and earnestly toward her Father's home above for some tokens of his approving love. These came to her, she thought, in manifold ways: not least in the loving, sympathizing hearts which surrounded her sick bed, and which seemed to reflect to her God's own heart of tender compassion and love. Although the mysterious mission and office of Christ had never been clear to her mind, while she had ever bowed in reverent faith before him, yet her later agony seemed to convey her thoughts to that Saviour and his dying sufferings, with a personal interest, if not with a sense of fellowship. Shortly before her death, she said: "I know that my Father hath in store for me far better mansions than any I have had here," and in this hope, with praying hearts around her, she passed away on the evening of the twenty-ninth anniversary of her marriage.

On the afternoon of Friday following she was laid to rest in the family burial-place, the setting sun and the autumn foliage giving unusual impressiveness to the scene.

> "They are not lost: they are within the door
> That shuts out loss and every hurtful thing—
> With angels bright, and loved ones gone before,
> In their Redeemer's presence evermore.
> And God himself their Lord, their Judge, their King."

Amos Tuck, as stated in the body of the genealogy, was born in Parsonsfield, Me., on the 2d day of August, 1810, being the son of John and Betsey (Towle) Tuck, both natives of Hampton, as likewise stated in the genealogy. John Tuck with his wife removed from Hampton to Parsonsfield, in March, 1807, carrying with them their two oldest children, Jonathan and Sarah, born in Hampton. His brothers, Josiah and Samuel, with their widowed mother, had preceded him in settling in Parsonsfield, and the moving cause of the settlement of Samuel and John in that town, was the fact that Josiah had spent their patrimony as well as his own, and the only thing they could get in return was land enough to make two moderate sized farms in that then comparatively unsettled region. Josiah soon left Parsonsfield, but the two younger brothers remained on their farms for life, improving them very much, each raising families, one of five and the other of six children, John dying in 1847, his wife in 1860 ; Samuel in 1860, and his wife in 1863.

Amos Tuck remained with his father, working upon the farm until 1827, when he commenced study at an academy in Effingham, and teaching winter schools in the vicinity, and in 1829 went to Hampton, where in connection with teaching, he resumed studies preparatory for college, and in the winter of 1831–32, became a member of the freshman class at Dartmouth College, whence he graduated in 1835. He then taught one term in the Academy in Pembroke, N. H., in connection with his friend and relative, Joseph Dow ; and in the winter following became preceptor of Hampton Academy, where he remained, pursuing the study of law in connection with teaching, until the spring of 1838, when he resigned his position, devoting himself wholly to legal study with James Bell, Esq., then of Exeter. In the month of November, 1838, he commenced the practice of his profession in Exeter, having previously opened an office for a short time in Hampton, and in December, 1838, became a partner in business with Mr. Bell.

In 1842 Mr. Tuck was representative in the New Hampshire legislature, and took an active part in the revision of the statutes enacted that year. He was a democrat in politics, but in 1844 he separated from the party with others, on the pro-slavery measure of the annexation of Texas, and in 1846 was nominated by the Independent Democrats for a member of Congress, and in 1847, by a combination of the Independent Democrats with the Whigs, was elected to Congress, where he took his seat in December of that year, as one of the only three distinctively anti-slavery men in the national House of Representatives. These men were Joshua R. Giddings of Ohio, Dr. John G. Palfrey of Massachusetts, and Amos Tuck of New Hampshire. Hon. John P. Hale, of New Hampshire, was the only anti-slavery senator in the higher branch of Congress.

The declaration of principles on which the Independents and the Whigs of New Hampshire united in 1846–47, and their union of action, was the first movement towards the formation of the great Republican party, which was eventually organized in Philadelphia in 1856, which nominated Mr. Lincoln at Chicago in 1860, carried the country in the election of that year, and eventually saved the government in the great struggle from 1861 to 1865.

Mr. Tuck was a member of the committee at the convention in Philadelphia, which gave the name of Republican to the new party, and which reported the platform of declared principles, a portion of which was drawn up by himself, on which the organization rallied. He was likewise a member of the Chicago Convention in 1860, and advocated from the first the nomination of Mr. Lincoln, whom he had previously known in Congress; and again as member of the Platform Committee at that convention, aided in the formation of the declaration of principles on which the great party rallied and were victorious in the election of Mr. Lincoln.

Mr. Tuck served three terms in Congress, closing his service upon the inauguration of President Pierce in 1853, when New Hampshire had become a democratic state, and the congressional districts had become so arranged that no man of the opposition could be elected. He was nominated and supported by the Independents and the Whigs for a fourth election.

After leaving Congress in 1853, Mr. Tuck retired from political life, though always interested in the questions agitated prior to the war, and taking an active part in their discussion before the people. When a conflict between the sections became inevitable, a convention was invited to sit in Washington, to devise means, if possible, to avert war. Mr. Tuck was appointed one of three persons to represent New Hampshire in that assembly. He was an active and anxious participant in the deliberations of that body, and he prepared, and as chairman of the committee appointed for the purpose, reported the Declaration on which the northern members of the "Peace Congress," so called, placed themselves as the ultimatum of their concessions to the slave power.

Mr. Lincoln tendered a foreign mission to Mr. Tuck, which was declined, and afterwards the appointment of Naval Officer at Boston, which was accepted; and in March, 1865, he re-appointed him to that position which he retained till removed by Mr. Johnson, when the latter commenced his proscription of Mr. Lincoln's friends, in the fall of 1865.

Mr. Tuck has always been interested in education; was for many years a trustee of Dartmouth College, of Phillips Exeter Academy, the Robinson Female Seminary, and other similar institutions. He has been interested largely in business transactions, east and west; has been several times to Europe on business, or for health and recreation, and still is in active occupation with various business matters, though long since retired from professional practice.

John Tuck, son of John Tuck, of Parsonsfield, Me., was the youngest of his father's children. He resided with his parents till 1836, when at the age of seventeen he became a pupil at the Academy at Hampton, then in charge of his brother Amos Tuck, where he remained until nearly qualified to enter college, when he was attacked with bleeding at the lungs, and this forced him to abandon his plan and the ambition of his life. He returned to Parsonsfield, where by the strictest attention to health, and by judicious exercise, he succeeded in combating disease, and he resided there more than ten years. He then followed his eldest brother to Biddeford, where he now resides.

His health has always been frail, yet he illustrates the advantage resulting from good judgment, constant self-control, and intelligent treatment of the physical system, in having been able to continue life to mature age, with a fair enjoyment of health, in spite of almost constant tendencies of an alarming character.

His occupation has been partly that of a farmer, and partly that of a business man. Declining from considerations of health to accept official positions, he has cultivated his leisure time by extensive reading, by some contributions to the press, and by occasional public addresses upon scientific and political topics.

Samuel Barrett Tuck, son of Samuel Jones Tuck and Judith (Gardner) Tuck, was born as above stated, June 11, 1799. Early in life it was the purpose of his parents to give him a liberal education. Having made the necessary preparation, he was admitted to Harvard College, and pursued the prescribed course of study for two years; then, on account of his father's pecuniary situation, he quitted college and went South. How long he remained at the South, or how he was occupied while there, I have not been informed. On his return he went to Nantucket; settled there, and on the 30th of September, 1823, was married by Rev. Seth F. Swift, to Susan, daughter of Aaron and Mary Mitchell, by whom he had eleven children. His wife was born March 21, 1806, and died March 3, 1875.

Mr. Tuck has always had the confidence of the people of Nantucket, and while resident among them rendered them important services. For some years he was chairman of the school committee. He was also a prominent business man, being an oil-merchant, ship-owner, and manufacturer of sperm candles. In his business he met with reverses and sustained heavy losses. In 1848 he went to New York city, whither he removed his family in the following year. He there became a ship-broker, and was engaged in that business for a considerable time; then obtained a position in the custom-house, from which he was removed to give place to some friend of the local managers.

During the present month (August, 1877), Mr. Tuck, at the age of seventy-eight years, has visited Nantucket; and a correspondent, who knew him many years ago, and who at the date of his letter had just called upon him, writes: "He is a fine-looking old gentleman, rather thin in flesh (he was never very fleshy), but his bright eye retains its wonted vivacity."

JOSEPH HENRY[7] (Samuel Jones,[6] John,[5] John,[4] John,[3] Edward,[2] Robert[1]), born March 12, 1812, being the youngest son of his parents that lived to manhood; never married. His name is here introduced in order to give some account (however incomplete) of his life and his labors.

Joseph Henry Tuck, son of Samuel Jones Tuck and Judith (Gardner) Tuck, was born in Dorchester, Mass., March 12, 1812; graduated at the Boston High School; learned the trade of watch-making. He was of an inventive genius, and while working in a candle manufactory, invented the endless wick. This appears to have been his first important invention; but others—some of them of great value—followed. He went to England for the purpose, it is said, of introducing his inventions into that country. He got into business by establishing himself in London as a civil engineer, having with him for some time his nephew, Stephen Samuel Davis. For a quarter of a century or more he was constantly occupied in inventing and introducing improved machinery.

Some of the facts here stated have been gathered from Drake's Dictionary of American Biography; and in order to show something of the character and extent of Mr. Tuck's inventions, I quote from that work the following statement:

"Among the fifty-five patents taken by him in different countries, are those for a candle machine, wrought-iron and bitumen gas and water pipes, a ventilating machine, a dredging machine, a rotary engine, a new system of breakwater for harbors, and his steam-engine packing—the most profitable of his inventions. He established, after great labor in overcoming prejudice, &c., the company to lay the first submarine electric-cable in 1848–49, between Dover and Calais, but was robbed of his interests in it by those whom he had interested in and assisted in planning that great undertaking. His plans and improvements for excavating the Suez Canal were taken by the contractors; but illness compelled him to abandon further connection with the undertaking."

Mr. Tuck afterward returned to the United States, having accumulated a large amount of property, the result of his inventive talent, made effective by close application, great energy and much hard work; though the profits from some of his inventions had gone more largely to others than to himself. On his arrival, finding a brother and sister who had formerly been prosperous, then much reduced in their circumstances, he generously contributed to their relief. He resided at Williamsburg, N. Y., doing business in New York city, where he engaged somewhat largely in real estate transactions. He also took some risks in mining stock and some other uncertain business, and partly, it is said, through his partner (not his nephew) lost most of his property. He had suffered from a lame leg from early life, and that eventually caused his death, which occurred at Williamsburg, April 10, 1875.

Mr. Tuck was a smart, active and very worthy man, and he had shown his kindness of heart by the aid he gave in his prosperity to his relatives who were in adversity.

Having received his early education in the schools of his native city, he entered as a student at the Wesleyan Academy, in Sackville, county of Westmoreland, N. B., then Attorney General of the Province, and afterwards Judge of the Supreme Court and Lieutenant Governor. Mr. Tuck remained in his office until he was elevated to the supreme bench in 1851, and completed his term of study with William Jack, Esq., of St. John; and was admitted an attorney in October, 1853, and in October, 1855, was called to the bar of the supreme court. In June, 1867, he was made Queen's Counsel and Clerk of the Crown in the Supreme Court; in October, 1874, he was appointed Recorder of St. John, the highest legal office in the city. Besides performing his official duties as Recorder of the city, and in the other offices which he holds, it is said that Mr. Tuck has a pretty extensive legal practice.

Like many other people in St. John, Mr. Tuck lost largely in the late destructive fire that swept over so large a portion of the city. It is said that his losses are estimated at 10,000 dollars.

THE EARLY HOMESTEADS OF THE TUCKS, AND WHEN ALIENATED.

In the account (pp. 15–21) of the final settlement of the estate of Robert Tuck, and of its division among the heirs after the death of his widow in 1673–4, it is shown that the ordinary, with several tracts of land, was then in the possession of Henry Robie, under a lease given some years before and then unexpired; and further, that an agreement (pp. 20, 21) had been entered into by John Samborne, the administrator, and John Sherborn, his brother-in-law, whose wife was one of the heirs, and who had himself acquired by purchase, an interest in the estate, that on the expiration of Robie's lease the estate in his possession (with some other) should be conveyed to Sherborn, to be held in fee simple.

It does not, however, appear from the account there given, whether or not the agreement was carried into effect; but that it was is evident from Sherborn's receipt then inadvertently omitted, but now given, though out of its proper place. The receipt, found in the records of the county of Norfolk, is in these words:

Ye 3d of Aprill, 1677.

These are to certifie y^{t} I, John Sherborne, do take & receive y^{e} howses & land y^{t} is before or above mention^{d} according to y^{e} agreement made between John Samborn & myselfe, in full possession, to be mine, my heirs, Executo^{rs}, Administrato^{rs} or assignes, & am fully satisfied according to o^{r} agreement above mentioned.

In witness whereof I have hereunto sett my hand.

Witness Joseph Sherbon — JOHN SHERBON.
Benjamin Moss. — Enter'd y^{e} 12th of Oct. 77.

Not long afterward John Sherborn sold this property to his kinsman Samuel Sherborn, who kept on the premises a public house, or ordinary, till he was sent in command of a company of soldiers against the eastern Indians, by whom he was killed at Macquoit, Me., on the 4th of August, 1691. After his death the ordinary was kept by Love Sherborn, his widow.

Edward Tuck, of the second generation, owned a dwelling house, as appears from the inventory of his estate in 1653. His widow, a year or two afterward, was married to James Wall, and her son, John Tuck, then a child, doubtless lived with her ; and as her husband died in 1659, when her son was about seven years old, leaving to her and his two daughters by her his dwelling house, there can be little doubt that the son continued to have his home with her and her daughters (except, perhaps, during his apprenticeship) till his own marriage in 1678.

When or how the tract of land long known as the Tuck place, a part of which is now (1877) frequently called the Tuck lot, came into his possession, has not been satisfactorily determined. This tract of seventy-two acres, is nearly half a mile north of the homestead of Robert Tuck, and lies on the westerly side of the "country road," between the homestead of Christopher G. Toppan on the south, and land of the Eastern Railroad, on which the depot stands, on the north. A large portion of this tract—including all the frontage—is owned by Mr. Joseph Ballard, of Boston, Mass., and has been his summer residence for many years.

On this tract lived Dea. John Tuck, and here were born some, and probably all of his children. This estate was also the residence of his son, Dea. Jonathan Tuck, while Edward, his eldest son settled in Kensington ; and John, the youngest, entered the ministry and became the first pastor of the church on the Isles of Shoals.

Here also lived two of Dea. Jonathan Tuck's sons, John the eldest, and Jonathan the youngest, both dwelling in their father's house. John died in 1792, but many years before his death another house had been built on the estate for his son John (No. 68), near the place on which Mr. Ballard's stable now stands, while the old house was located near the southeast corner of the garden. Benjamin, also, Dea. Tuck's second son, probably lived on the homestead a few years, while Samuel, next in order, settled in Kensington, where his great-grandson, Charles E. Tuck, now lives.

Jonathan, the Deacon's youngest son, lived as above stated, in the old house with his father. He died in 1780, leaving five children. His wife Huldah, being unable to bring up her family without parting with the ownership of the real estate, sold it in January, 1795; and about 1800, Josiah, the eldest son, went to Parsonsfield, Me., where he had bought a considerable tract of land (selected by his uncle, Capt. Jeremiah Moulton) several years earlier; and he having become indebted, in the settlement of his father's estate, to his brothers, and being unable to pay them, except in land in that town, Samuel and John followed him thither—the former about 1803, and the latter in 1807. Josiah sold to his brothers his land in Parsonsfield, and returned to Hampton, but soon after removed to Portsmouth, while Samuel and John lived and died in Parsonsfield. Their farms lay easterly of Province Pond, John's farm adjoining the pond for half the length of the easterly shore, while Samuel's adjoined his brother's on the southerly side.

Not far from the time of the sale of a part of the Tuck land in Hampton, as above related—perhaps a little later—John Tuck (No. 68), who lived in the northern house on the premises, and who appears to have owned most of the estate that had belonged to his father, sold his house and lands, and, like his cousins, removed to Parsonsfield.

James Tuck, a brother of John last mentioned, having a reversionary interest in some part of the estate held by his mother, sold that interest in 1797, but remained on the premises (his mother's dower) till his death, which occurred about a year before that of his mother. She died October 28, 1813.
